The nightlife sector here in Beijing has flourished into somewhat of a booming industry over the past few years.

Dance clubs in particular have seen an immense rise in popularity as more and more late night discos have proliferated throughout the city. Students and professionals alike, both foreign and local, have shown an increasing tendency to seek out these large and exciting new venues.

In preparation for the summer season, CCTV.com English kicks off our 'Summer Nights in Beijing' series by presenting our own definitive guide to some of the best dance clubs Beijing has to offer.

E! Entertainment Television says VICS is the "hottest, hippest nightlife destination in Beijing". Located by the Workers Stadium, VICS is conveniently situated near Beijing's main bar area, Sanlitun. The venue includes a sports bar and restaurant. However, the dance club itself is what offers the most fulfilling late night experience.

VICS has a large dance floor consistently packed with lively young patrons. The music sets generally consist of a balanced combination of mainstream r&b, pop, soul, reggae and hip-hop hits, and the crowd is always energetic and ready to have a good time. This venue has a wide range of appeal and is the type of place virtually anyone can enjoy.

The clientele is a mix of both local and expatriate regulars, and includes a lot of young twenty-somethings and college-aged partiers.

Every Wednesday night is Ladies Night, with free drinks for girls until midnight, and there are plenty of special events and shows hosted on weekends.

This club comes highly recommended. If you're looking for a wonderful night out drinking and dancing to the latest hits, VICS is the place to be.
